CAREER OVERVIEW

Professor Hickie is currently an NHMRC Senior Principal Research Fellow (2018-2022) (previously an NHMRC Australian Research Fellow, 2007-2012), a Fellow of the Academy of Social Sciences in Australia (FASSA), a Fellow of the Royal Australian & New Zealand College of Psychiatrists (FRANZCP), A Member of the Order of Australia (AM), a Doctor of Medicine (MD, UNSW, 1990), a Professor of Psychiatry at Sydney Medical School (University of Sydney, 2003-) and the Executive Director of the Brain & Mind Research Institute, University of Sydney (2003-2014). In 2015 he became a fellow of the new Australian Academy of Health and Medical Sciences. From 2012, Professor Hickie was appointed as one of Australia's first National Mental Health Commissioners and was reappointed to a second term in that role in 2014.

Professor Hickie is recognised nationally for his role over the last two decades in using clinical, health services and population health data to drive innovations in health services in mental health policy, particularly enhanced mental health awareness, primary care services and increased access to psychological treatments. As the inaugural CEO of beyondblue: the national depression initiative, he led the development of this major national organisation and developed its implementation and evaluation strategies.

Professor Hickie's work in linking community understanding to population health and health services developments for those affected by common anxiety and depressive disorders is recognised internationally. This is evident through his participation and leadership roles in international networks and initiatives, including notably those in the Asia-Pacific Region. The focus of this work lies in recognizing the contribution that common mental health problems play to non-participation in education, employment and broader forms of social participation.

In Australia, Professor Hickie has participated in each of the major national advisory bodies on mental health to the Federal Health Minister or Prime Minister since 2007. He has worked with the Mental Health Council of Australia since 2001 to advance national mental health policy and practice. In partnership with the Mental Health Council of Australia, the Human Rights and Equal Opportunities Commission, Orygen Youth Health, the Young & Well CRC and the National Mental Health Commission, he has authored major national reports on the evaluation or delivery of the community experiences of mental health services and the impacts of various mental health initiatives.

Over the last decade, Professor Hickie has worked in close partnership with Professor Pat McGorry at the forefront of development and evaluation of the new primary-care based youth mental health services (headspace: the national youth mental health foundation). He has also been a critical voice in the advocacy for enhanced social as well as better health services for those with persistent mental illness and increased accountability for delivery of those services. Concurrently, he has worked closely with Assoc Professor Jane Burns, in partnership with the Inspire Foundation to develop e-mental health initiatives, resulting in the $27M Young & Well Co-operative Research Centre (2011-2016), of which Professor Hickie is the Chair of the Scientific Advisory Council. This initiative has now led to the further investment of $30m over the next three years by the Turnbull Government to develop Project Synergy as the central digital architecture for mental health services delivery in the online environment.

The success of each of these national initiatives was recognised in the 2011 Australian Budget, which devoted $2.2 billion (over five years) to new mental health services (including over $400m to new youth services and expansion of the headspace services to 90 sites nationally) and also prioritised e-health developments, mental health research and established the new National Mental Health Commission. These developments were further enhanced by the 2014 national budget announcements which devoted a further $18m to a national centre of youth mental health and $5m to development of e-mental health integration led by the Young & Well CRC.

From a specialist psychiatrist perspective, Professor Hickie has focused on using new technologies (structural and functional neuroimaging, immune markers, circadian measurements) to assist with the delineation of novel pathways to depression and other mood disorders. This work has emphasised the role of genetic (stress-sensitivity, disturbed circadian systems) and environmental factors (e.g. alcohol and other substance misuse, dysfunctional relationships, infective illness and disturbed sleep patterns) and vascular disease in older persons.

Internationally, Professor Hickie is recognised for his novel work in the post-infective neuropsychiatric disorders (persistent fatigue states), the delineation of the relevance of sub-cortical vascular disease to onset and course of depression in the elderly, his leadership of population-based approaches to changing attitudes to mental health (particularly depression) and his role in increasing investments in new services (particularly youth services and new e-mental health structures). His previous input into Centers of Disease Control (USA) and NIH consensus statements are evidence of this impact.

In partnership with Professor McGorry, he has developed a novel clinical staging framework for emerging and severe mental disorders in young people. He has led the establishment of large clinical cohorts focused on the emerging mood disorders and promoted other national epidemiological and longitudinal studies to examine the emergence of mood disorders in the wider population. He is a key member of novel international family and longitudinal studies designed to answer similar questions. His current programs with the Genetic Epidemiology Branch of the NIMH are evidence of his ongoing contributions in the delineation of risk factors for and pathways to the onset of major mood disorders.

Professor Hickie's leadership (CIA) of the new NHMRC Centre of Research Excellence (Clinical) for Optimizing the treatment of emerging mood disorders in young people (2014-2018) is evidence of his capacity to coordinate and lead major new projects to enhance Australia's capacity to respond to young people with disabling mental health problems. Similarly, his key role in the NHMRC CRE for Suicide Prevention (2013-2017, CIA Professor Helen Christensen) is evidence of his capacity to work effectively with major new national population-focused initiatives in mental health.

As of November 2016, he has published over 560 peer-reviewed papers, and according to Scopus has an h-factor of 66, based on 19 206 citations; Web of Science has 593 recognised reports, 16116 citations, 27.2 citations per work and an h-index of 61. Google Scholar (incorporating more of his reports to non-scientific and other agencies) notes 28,815, citations and a h-index of 79.

Professional Career Development

In 1993-1994, Professor Hickie was a Harkness Fellow of the Commonwealth Fund of New York and an Associate Professor at Duke University North Carolina. On returning to Australia, in 1995 he established the Academic Department of Psychiatry at St George Hospital Sydney. In 1997, he was appointed Professor of Community Psychiatry at the University of NSW.

From 2000 to 2003, Professor Hickie was the inaugural CEO of beyondblue: the national depression initiative, and from 2003 to 2006, he was the clinical advisor to this national organisation. In his role at beyondblue, he established the major awareness, prevention and early intervention programs, infrastructure, consumer and carer participation organisations, national community and primary care partnerships, large and small grants mechanisms and evaluative processes, which have underpinned the internationally-recognised work of the organisation. The impact of beyondblue has been assessed systematically by both internal and external agencies. It demonstrates that a well-coordinated, community-led and clinically-informed health agency can have a major positive impact.

While a Board Member of the Mental Health Council of Australia, Professor Hickie was at the forefront of national movements to assess consumers' and carers' experiences of mental health services. These activities have resulted in key publications such as the 2002 report "Out of Hospital, Out of Mind!", the 2004 pre-election policy document "Investing in Australia's Future" and the 2005 report in partnership with the Human Rights and Equal Opportunities Commission "Not for Service". These reports assisted to focus national attention on the need to reshape mental health services to concentrate on the needs of youth and commit to key social, educational and economic outcomes. They were fundamental to the COAG agreement of 2006-2011 which resulted in an additional $5.5b expenditure in mental health and the introduction of access to psychological services within the broad Medicare Scheme.

From 2008-2011, Professor Hickie served on the National Advisory Council on Mental Health reporting to the Federal Minister of Health and Aging. In 2011 he was appointed to the Mental Health Expert Advisory Group to the Minister for Mental Health and the Prime Minister. From 2007-2010, he served on the Australian National Council on Drugs.

Professor Ian Hickie was appointed in 2003 as the inaugural Executive Director of the Brain and Mind Centre (formally BMRI) at The University of Sydney and in 2015 was appointed as the Co-Director, Health and Policy. The Brain and Mind Centre has received extensive support from the Australian Government and the NSW Government to develop research, training and clinical services infrastructure devoted to the reduction of the national health burden due to psychiatric and neurological disorders, particularly amongst young persons. This forms part of the $85 million redevelopment program being funded by The University of Sydney and governmental and private partners.

Professor Hickie has been a member of the NHMRC Program grants (2005-2009; 2009-2013) led by Professor McGorry. These focus on the evaluation of clinical interventions in order to reduce the health burden among young persons with severe mental illness. The Brain and Mind Centre serves as the Sydney base for these major national research, education and training programs. Additionally, these groups were selected to lead headspace: the National Youth Mental Health Foundation.

In 2005, Professor Hickie was awarded the Margaret Tobin Award of the Royal Australian and New Zealand College of Psychiatrists, which recognises the Fellow of the College who has made the most significant contribution to Administrative Psychiatry in Australia or New Zealand during the last five years. In 2006, Professor Hickie received the Australian Honours Award of Member (AM) in the General Division for services to medicine in the development of key national mental health initiatives and general practice services in both the public and non-government sectors. In 2009, he received the Research Australia Advocacy Award for his work in mental health advocacy. In 2014, he received the Founders Medal of the Society for Mental Health Research (SMHR, formerly ASPR), recognising his lifetime contribution to mental health research in Australasia.

In 2006, the Australian Financial Review, ranked Professor Hickie as one of Australia's top 10 cultural influences, due to his role in initiating the 2006-2011 COAG reforms and investments in mental health. The Factiva data-base of news stories notes that during 2007-2011, Professor Hickie appeared on 790 occasions in media stories about mental health, brain health and general health reform.

From 2007-2012, Professor Hickie was one of the first NHMRC Australian Fellows; recognising excellence in Australian Medical Research. This facet of his work focused on expansion of population-based mental health research and development of international mental health strategies.

Since returning to full-time academia in 2004, after being CEO of beyondblue, Professor Hickie has received over $37m in NHMRC competitive grant funding. This comprises an Australian fellowship (464914); a Senior Principal Research Fellowship (1046899); two program grants (566529 and 350241); a CCRE grant (264611); two CRE grants (1042580 and 1061043); a TCR in Mental Health Research (1042666); a partnership grant (1076940); as well as major project grants (notably, 301930, 1060397, 1069141 and 1086683). Further to this, he has attracted $732,434 in ARC grant funding (LP0883035 and LP13010045). Professor Hickie has attracted more than $5,000,000 in specific national youth health services grants ($5,400,000 for headspace population health) and $2,000,000 in recurrent annual funding from 2012 onwards. Professor Hickie and the Brain and Mind Centre (formally BMRI) are essential partners to the new $27,647,000 CRC for Young People, Technology and Wellbeing. Other funding has included NSW Government ($600,150 for drug and alcohol services), $1,899,198 from other non-government funding bodies such as the National Heart Foundation, beyondblue: the national depression initiative, the Cancer Council of Australia and the Bupa Health Foundation, and $431,000 from pharmaceutical industry-supported research.
